This book has a lot of partially drawn scenes for a little artist to complete. From drawing a tree house to a kangaroos in Australian there is a lot to do. The book is very "gender inclusive" and has a handful of pages appropriate to add into a science homeschooling curriculum... however the vast majority of the book is plain fun and the only learning is art, creativity, and imagination. In my opinion, it would be appropriate for 6-8 year olds... its too advanced for kindergarten and too simple for a 5th grader. The con is the the book does not lay flat for easy use plus loose drawing space in the crack. Some people would pay to get it spiral bound. Why it lost a star: I did not find this doodling book as engaging as the others I own and it felt as if the book was trying to be for two different age groups at the same time without succeeding at either level. In other words, sometimes there is just a bridge and we are to draw the rest of the scenery or we are asked to draw people climbing a cliff without being shown how to... so that makes the book rather advanced, but then you draw kites on strings and fish on the end of fishing poles plus a very simple large font text which makes the book at a younger level. I am not saying that should not buy the book, its just I liked the other ones I reviewed on better.
