Rainbow Crow: Nagweyaabi-Aandeg

Synopsis

Before two leggeds walked on Mother Earth there was a great cold. The animals formed a council; someone had to seek help from the Creator. Rainbow Crow, a most colourful bird, was selected because he had a beautiful voice that would surely impress the Creator. He flew into the heavens and won fire from above. But on the way back the fire began to burn his plumage black and destroy his beautiful voice. But Rainbow Crow persevered, bringing the life-saving fire safely back to his friends. This Lenape legend of courage and sacrifice is masterfully retold by award-winning author David Bouchard. The stunning art, painted on traditional drums by celebrated Canadian artist, David Jean, will inspire young and old alike. English/Ojibwe edition. For the French/Ojibwe edition see Corneille Arc-en-ciel.

A Very beautiful poem I was read to as a child that now I'm able to share with my children.

Wonderful large hardcover book with beautiful illustrations. The book also comes with a CD of the poem. It's ok but I would suggest reading the book your self or to others first. My wife, kids & myself went out onto our land sat down with nature & shared this excellent story with our girls. We loved every minute of it. I would highly recommend this book to anyone.

My students are enjoying this version of the legend. They especially enjoyed the music and reading on the CD.
